REAL WEALTH PROTECTION

DURING UNCERTAIN TIMES

For over 5,000 years, the world’s wealthiest families have preserved their wealth by holding physical bullion.

Why Precious Metals Bullion?

The value of virtually every major currency is rapidly eroding due to unprecedented currency creation by central banks around the world. Because currencies are shrinking in value, so too is the value of the currency-denominated stocks, bonds and other financial assets held inside an investor’s portfolio. Investors may be surprised to learn that the Canadian and US dollar have lost more than 82 percent of their purchasing power since 1971. In contrast, precious metals bullion continues to rise in value against all currencies. Bullion is once again resuming its historical role as money: a store of value and a proven source of real wealth and portfolio protection that cannot be created out of thin air like paper currencies. (See Figure 1).

THREE REASONS TO OWN PRECIOUS METALS BULLION

1. PROTECTS AGAINST INFLATION

US and global government debt has soared to staggering and unsustainable levels. The only politically acceptable way to reduce these debts is to inflate them away through massive paper currency creation. This lowers the purchasing power of paper currencies resulting in a rise in the cost of living, and ultimately lowers the purchasing power of investment portfolios. Precious metals bullion is not a currency, but something far more valuable. It is tangible money, a store of value, and an asset class that will protect against inflation, no matter how much paper currency governments create.

2. PROVIDES TRUE PORTFOLIO DIVERSIFICATION

Of all the major asset classes, only precious metals have a relatively low correlation to all other asset classes. This simply means that when the prices of stocks, bonds, real estate and treasury bills fall, precious metals tend to not fall as much and overall volatility of the portfolio is reduced. This low correlation between precious metals and financial assets is essential for true portfolio protection. (See Figure 2)

Many investors believe their portfolios have exposure to precious metals because they hold stocks in mining companies or precious metals Exchange Traded Funds (ETF’s), or bank certificates. But as a safe haven, no gold, silver or platinum stock (or even an ETF) compares with ownership of physical precious metals. During a financial crisis or a severe stock market decline, precious metals tend to outperform mining stocks, often quite dramatically, because mining stocks are highly correlated to stock markets.

3. BULLION WILL ALWAYS BE IN LIMITED SUPPLY

Precious metals bullion is returning to its status as the only real money, putting it into direct competition with the US dollar. Fortunately, precious metals bullion cannot be created out of thin air like paper currencies. This is what has preserved its value for thousands of years. While the demand for bullion is surging, mine supply of gold, silver and platinum has been declining for well over a decade. At present, the total value of available, investable, aboveground gold bullion amounts to about $3 trillion held between central banks and private investors. In contrast, total global financial assets (stocks and bonds) are valued at an astronomical $184 trillion or more. As Figure 3 shows, bullion is priced at barely one percent of total financial assets. What do you think will happen when just a portion of these paper assets attempt to rebalance into physical bullion?

In conclusion, the only way to help secure your financial future is through ownership of physical precious metals bullion.
DOW:GOLD RATIO

The Dow:Gold Ratio is an indicator which shows investors whether to favour precious metals or stocks in their portfolios. It is calculated by dividing the Dow Jones Industrial Index by the price of an ounce of gold. More simply, it is the number of ounces of gold required to “buy” one unit of the Dow. When the ratio is rising, it is time to be overweight (purchase more) stocks and other financial assets. When the ratio is falling, it is time to be overweight gold and precious metals in your portfolio. Economic conditions make it likely that it will continue to fall to a 2:1 or 1:1 ratio.
